

Join Our Team: Fundraising Operations Officer

August 23, 2022

Do you have exceptional attention to detail and love writing? Would you like to help raise money for life-changing projects around the world? The Global Fund for Forgotten People is hiring a Fundraising Operations Officer to play a key role within a small team, supporting Fundraising and Operations activities.

Title: Fundraising Operations Officer
Reports to: Chief Philanthropy Officer
Salary: From £28,000 pa, depending on experience

Person specification

The role will suit someone highly organised with good attention to detail and the ability to manage effective systems. Experience working with high net worth clients or other senior management is desirable. The successful candidate will have excellent interpersonal skills, be a self-starter and flexible and comfortable working in a fast-paced environment, learning through doing.

The role requires the ability to write clearly and concisely to a high standard, have a good understanding of the principles of effective fundraising and to contribute to the development of new approaches, systems and concepts across the organisation. The candidate must have the ability to understand the complexities of a global organisation as well as being comfortable picking up general tasks as part of a small team.

The role involves some overseas travel, though is based primarily at our office in London. Sympathy with the teachings of the Catholic faith is essential, as is the ability to work with people from many different backgrounds and cultures.
